Kata Pengantar

Sebagai bentuk dukungan terhadap pelaksanaan Asian Games XVIII pada 2018 yang dilaksanakan di Jakarta dan Pelembang, Kementerian Pendidikan dan Kebudayaan Republik Indonesia melalui Badan Pengembangan dan Pembinaan Bahasa menerbitkan ulang buku Tujuh Hari Pertama di Indonesia atau Your First Seven-Days in Indonesia. Buku ini disampaikan kepada para atlet dan ofisial dari mancanegara agar para tamu negara tersebut lebih mengenal Indonesia melalui penggunaan bahasa Indonesia secara langsung di Indonesia. Buku saku ini berisi materi pengenalan bahasa Indonesia untuk pemenuhan kebutuhan secara sintas.

Kami mengucapkan terima kasih kepada Bapak Erick Thohir sebagai Presiden Indonesia Asian Games Organizing Committee (Inasgoc) yang memberi kesempatan agar buku ini dapat dimanfaatkan oleh para atlet dan ofisial di tengah-tengah kesibukan dan aktivitas pelaksanaan Asian Games ini. Dalam terbitan khusus ini materi yang disajikan masih sama sebagaimana pada edisi terbitan sebelumnya, tetapi untuk menambah estetika dan untuk menyesuaikan dengan pelaksanaan Asian Games ke-18, buku ini diterbitkan dengan desain dan gambar sampul yang baru.

Kami berharap para atlet dan ofisial gelaran Asian Games ke-18 dapat memanfaatkan buku saku ini dan dapat melanjutkan pengenalan terhadap bahasa Indonesia tidak hanya dalam waktu tujuh hari, tetapi dalam waktu yang lebih lama. Selamat mengenal bahasa Indonesia dan selamat bertanding, semoga kunjungan para tamu mancanegara ini berkesan.

Foreword

As a form of supports to the implementation of the program on the 18th Asian Games which to be held in Jakarta and Palembang, the Board of Language Development and Cultivation, Ministry of Education and Culture of the Republic of Indonesia republish the pocket book Tujuh Hari Pertama di Indonesia or Your First Seven-Days in Indonesia. This pocket book contains the introductory words and phrases of Indonesian language that use as a basic survival guide. We have also included a great deal of socio-cultural information concerning daily life in Indonesia that we feel the foreign athletes and officials will find useful.

We would like to extend our utmost gratitude to Mr. Erick Thohir as Chairman of the 2018 Asian Games Organizing Committee (Inasgoc) who gave us the opportunity to present this book to the foreign athletes and officials in the midst of their activities in the Asian Games. In this special edition, we republish the book with new design and new cover image to intensify the aesthetic value and to conform it with the theme of the 18th Asian Games though the material given in this book is still the same as the previous edition.

We hope the athletes and officials of the 18th Asian Games can take the advantage of this book and can continue their interest in Indonesian language not only within seven days, but also for longer time.

We wish you a successful outing at the 18th Asian Games and we hope your visit to Indonesia is memorable.

The Head of Board of Language Development and Cultivation

PRONUNCIATION IN THE INDONESIAN LANGUAGE

There are 5 vowels and 21 consonants in the Indonesian alphabet. As well as representing individual sounds, they also combine to form other phonemes, namely ng [ŋ], ny [ɲ], sy [ʃ] and kh [χ].

In addition, some of the vowels have more than one variation of sound, or allophones as they are known. For instance, the vowel e can be pronounced as [æ, e and ə]. Indonesian also has three diphthongs: ai [aj], oi [oj] and au [aj].

The remainder of this section comprises a detailed explanation of how to pronounce the various sounds in the Indonesian language. Some examples are also listed alongside the explanations in order to aid your understanding of the different phonemes.

Vowels

1. a is pronounced [a], like a in car.

anda	[an.da]	'you'
bawa	[ba.wa]	'bring'

2. e has three pronunciations. They are [æ], [e] and [ə].

e is pronounced as [æ], like e in rest.

kakek	[ka.kæk]	'grandfather'
nenek	[næ.næk]	'grandmother'

Pronunciation

Consonant Combinations

There are phonemes that are represented by two consonants in the alphabets. However, they are pronounced as a single sound, as follows:

1. ng is pronounced [ŋ], like ng in sing.

ingat	[i.ŋat]	'remember'
bawang	[ba.wanɡ]	'onion'

2. ny is pronounced [ɲ], like n in new.

nyaman	[na.man]	'comfortable'
tanya	[ta.na]	'ask'

3. kh may pronounced as [x] or [k].

khusus	[xu.sus]/[ku.sus]	'special'
akhir	[a.xir]/[a.kir]	'end'

4. sy is pronounced [ʃ], like sh in shell.

syarat	[ʃa.rat]	'requirement'
masyarakat	[ma.ʃa.ra.kat]	'society/community'

Vowel Combinations

There are three vowel combinations in Indonesian which may pronounced as two separate vowels or diphthongs. They are ai, oi and au. They are pronounced as two separate sounds if they occur word initially and medially, i.e. between two consonants. However, in word-final position, these three vowel combinations are mostly pronounced as diphthongs, ai [ay], oi [oy], and au [aw].

1. ai is pronounced as two separate sounds in word-initial and word-medial position.

air	[a.ir]	'water'
kain	[ka.in]	'cloth'
main	[ma.in]	'play'

ai is pronounced as diphthong [aj] word finally, like y in cry.

pantai	[pan.taj]	'beach'
rama i	[ra.ma j ]	'noisy'

2. oi is pronounced as two separate sounds in word-medial position.

koin	[kp.in]	'coin'
------	---------	--------

oi is pronounced as diphthong [bj], like oy in boy in word-final position.

ambo i	[am.bpj]	'wow'
sep oi	[se.pbj]	'breezy'

3. au is pronounced as two separate sounds in separate syllable in word-medial position.

laut	[la.ut]	'sea'
baut	[ba.ut]	'bolt'

au is pronounced as diphthong [aw], like ow in cow in word-final position.

kemara au	[ke.ma.ra w ]	'dry'
kala au	[ka.law]	'if'

However, in some words au is pronounced as two separate sounds in word-final position.

bau	[ba.u]	'smell'
mau	[ma.u]	'want'

Other Vowel Combinations

Indonesian has other vowel combinations to those previously mentioned that are not considered to be diphthongs. They are always pronounced as separate sounds and glides ([w] or [j]) can be inserted in between the two vowels. The examples are as follows:

buah	[bu. <sup>w</sup> ah]	'fruit'
duit	[du. <sup>w</sup> it]	'money'
ciut	[ci.yut]	'narrow'
liat	[li.yat]	'tough'
pionir	[pi.yonir]	'pioneer'

Pronunciation

Identical-vowel Combinations

Indonesian has words with identical-vowels that are pronounced as two separate sounds. Most of them are pronounced with glottal in between.

saat	[sa?.at]	'moment'
maaf	[ma?.af]	'sorry'
koordinator	[ko?.or.di.na.tor]	'coordinator'
beloön	[blo?.on]	'stupid'

Spelling Reform

In 1947 and 1972, the Indonesian government advocated a number of spelling reforms to be introduced to Bahasa Indonesia. The changes involved a move away from old spellings that were closely derived from the Dutch language and the adoption of new spellings.

Although the old spellings are no longer in use in the written form of language, they still survive in proper names.

The following is a list of the changes;

oe	u	e.g. kroepoek becomes krupuk	'crackers'
tj	c	e.g. tjutji becomes cuci	'to wash'
dj	j	e.g. djarum becomes jarum	'needle'
j	y	e.g. djaja becomes jaya	'victorious'
nj	ny	e.g. njamuk becomes nyamuk	'mosquito'
sj	sy	e.g. sjarat becomes syarat	'requisite'
ch	kh	e.g. achir becomes akhir	'end'

A good example of the old spelling in modern usage is in the name of Jakarta's International Airport. It is formally known as Soekarno-Hatta International Airport, named after Indonesia's first President, Soekarno, and first Vice-President Mohammad Hatta.

1.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

Saying thank you

Terima kasih. At most tourist destinations in Indonesia, you will come across many food and drink vendors. You will also find vendors offering souvenirs. If you feel like you want to purchase anything, you should bargain to get the best price. If you don't want to buy anything, then you can just say terima kasih - 'thank you'. It may seem strange to decline an offer by saying thank you, however, in Indonesia, terima kasih means 'no, thank you.' You can be even more polite by smiling and shaking your head when you say terima kasih.

Permisi

To ask someone for information before you ask a question, you can use the expression permisi 'excuse me'. You can also use ya at the end of your question, for instance Di mana toilet paling dekat, ya? Using permisi and ya in this way will make your questions more polite.

Tolong/Mohon/Silakan

In Indonesia, you will come across three different words that would all translate into English as 'please'.

Tolong is used to make an imperative command sound more polite, i.e. when you are asking someone for a favour. For example, 'Tolong bersihkan kamar saya.' means 'Please make up my room'.

Mohon is an extremely polite and very formal expression that is also used with imperative commands. It is most often used when addressing elders and superiors. For example, if you really need help from someone older than you, you should say 'Mohon bantuan Ibu/Bapak!' Another usage of mohon is in formal public announcements, for example 'Mohon tidak merokok!', which means 'Please do not smoke.'

Silakan is used when a person would like someone else to feel at leisure, or when they wish someone to do something for their own benefit. For example, as you enter a restaurant, the waiter or waitress might say to you 'Silakan duduk!', which means 'Please have a seat'. Similarly, if you are a dinner guest in an Indonesian household, the host might say to you 'Silakan makan!'. This is usually the cue for you to begin eating.

Mau ke mana?

Indonesians are famous for their kindness and hospitality. Often when they see a foreigner walking down the street, they will say hello and attempt to make some passing small talk, even if you are a total stranger! For instance, they will smile at you and ask simple, friendly questions like mau ke mana, which means, 'where do you want to go?' Understandably, this can be disconcerting for foreigners unaccustomed to being accosted by strangers. However, when an Indonesian asks you a question like mau ke mana, they do not mean to invade your privacy, they are simply being friendly and you don't even have to respond if you don't want to. Just smile or say jalan-jalan ('I'm just wandering'), and your reply will be much appreciated.

Salam - Greetings

Bapak/Ibu

In Indonesia, Bapak and Ibu, translated as Sir and Madam, are the most respectful forms of address; Bapak is used for men and Ibu is used for women. Bapak and Ibu are used in formal situations where the person being addressed is over the age of 20. Bapak may also be shortened to Pak, and Ibu is often shortened to Bu. This occurs most often when used in conjunction with the addressee's name. For example, Pak Bambang, or Bu Tuti.

Mas/Mbak

In Indonesia, Mas is used as a masculine pronoun and Mbak (pronounced Mba) is used as a feminine pronoun. Both terms may also be transformed into titles, such as Mas Bambang or Mbak Tuti. Mas and Mbak can also be roughly translated to Sir and Madam, however, these terms are much more widespread in everyday use than their English equivalents. Mas and Mbak are considered to be more formal terms of address than using the addressee's name directly. The two terms are used when the person being addressed is either younger than the speaker or of a similar age, or if the speaker and addressee already know each other well.

Weather and Climate in Indonesia

Indonesia has a tropical climate with just two seasons. The dry season begins in April and ends in October. The dry season is generally considered the best time to travel. The monsoon season begins in November and ends in March. The monsoon season is also a good time to travel, because it's quieter than in high season and the rain usually lasts for no more than a couple of hours at the end of the day. On most islands there is little difference in weather between winter and summertime; generally temperatures stay high, averaging at 25-30°C all year round.

In the West and South-West you can expect the occasional spot of rain in the dry season as well. On Sumatra, the monsoons can be very heavy, which often causes roads to become inaccessible. By contrast, there is very little rain during the dry season in East Java. Temperatures on Sumatra and Java average around 22-29°C throughout the year.

The dry season typically lasts from April until September, with May, June and July being the coolest months when temperatures 'drop' to 28°C. Monsoon season starts in October and ends in March, but in between the monsoon showers you can expect bright blue skies and plenty of sunshine. The hottest months are February and March, with temperatures around 30°C. The best time to travel to Bali is during the drier, cooler months from May–August, with high temperatures during the day and cooler evenings with a refreshing sea breeze.

The difference between the wet and dry season is slightly more noticeable in the Nusa Tenggara region, which lies to the east of Bali. The driest months are August and September, the wettest are November to February. The length of the wet and dry season varies from island to island. The climate on Lombok is similar to that of Bali, and the same goes for Sumbawa and Flores. As a rule of thumb: the closer to Australia, the longer the dry season.

Salam - Greetings

Due to its irregular shape and the fact that it's on a geographical borderline, Sulawesi has two very dissimilar climates. In the Southern part of the island, there is a monsoon season from October until March. In the Northern part however, especially around Manado, most of the rainfalls occurs during June and July. The North also has a dry season from August–October. Temperatures can vary significantly; along the coast it can be (stiflingly) hot with temperatures around 34°C, whereas the hills can be cool with a maximum around 24°C, cool enough to need a sweater in the evening.

2.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

There are several kinds of public transportation at the airport, including taxi, bus, and sometimes train. Most airports provide bus services to and from the centre of town at a much cheaper rate than a taxi. If you decide to take a taxi, make sure that you choose a taxi with a meter. A few airports have train stations nearby, such as Yogyakarta and Medan.

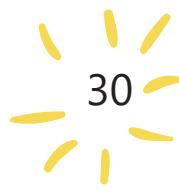

Be warned, many illegal taxi drivers will try to offer you a ride, so please be careful and use a legitimate company such as Bluebird or Express!

Upon arrival, you might be accosted by various touts offering to carry your bags. Should you wish to use a porter, you should expect to pay somewhere in the region of Rp20.000-Rp50.000.

If you require any help or further information, please ask at one of the many airport information desks.

3.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

For the majority of Indonesian people, bargaining for prices is a very important part of the shopping experience. Through bargaining, items can be obtained at cheaper, more desirable prices.

Indonesian traders sometimes give a higher price when dealing with foreign customers. This is because Indonesians think foreigners who come to Indonesia have a lot of money.

Some tips:

- Do not try to bargain in shopping malls and stores with fixed prices. You only can bargain at road-side stalls or in traditional markets.
- Some road-side stall sellers will offer you a special discount if you are the first or last customer of the day.
- Do not start bargaining if you have no intention of buying.
- To start the bargaining process, first ask the vendor the price of the item that you are interested in. Then ask if the price can be reduced (Boleh kurang?). If the answer is "Yes" (Boleh) or "Yes, a little" (Boleh, sedikit), then you may begin negotiating.

Rupiah (Rp) is the official currency of Indonesia. The notes are printed by the Bank of Indonesia and, in ascending order come in the following denominations:

Seribu rupiah (Rp1.000,00)

Dua ribu rupiah (Rp2.000,00)

Lima ribu rupiah (Rp5.000,00)

Sepuluh ribu rupiah (Rp10.000,00)

Jalan Jaksa (Jaksa Street) is the name of a famous street in central Jakarta and is well-known as the backpackers' hub in the capital. Since the late 1960s, this road has been designed as a place that offers a variety of options for backpackers looking for cheap accommodation as well as nightly entertainment. Many tourists from different countries choose to stay on Jalan Jaksa. Here, they can mingle with local people and experience the atmosphere and nightlife of central Jakarta at affordable prices.

Similarly, Yogyakarta (pronounced "Jogja") has a district called Pasar Kembang (Flower Market), also known as Sarkem. Sarkem district offers alternative and affordable accommodation located close to the Malioboro shopping center. The hotels in this area continue to attract travelers from home and abroad.

Di hotel - At the hotel

For rates as low as Rp100,000 per night, guests' rooms come with ensuite bathroom facilities and breakfast is also included.

One common item you can expect to find in any Indonesian bedroom is a 'Dutch wife' (guling). Legend has it that the Dutch men who colonised Indonesia created these sausage-shaped pillows in order to replace the warmth of their loved ones back home. Hence the name of the pillow, a 'Dutch wife.'

5.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

Angkot is short for Angkutan Kota (City Transport). A typical angkot looks like a minivan or minibus, with an open side door and an eye-catching paintjob, such as a bright red, blue, or green. Each angkot has its own route, which is usually spelt out on the windshield of the vehicle. For example, if an angkot is displaying 'Pasar Baru-Cendrawasih-Senen' on the windshield, it means that that angkot leave from both Pasar Baru and Senen, and will travel in either direction via Cendrawasih. Additionally, the angkot's route will be indicated by a letter or number code, or a coloured line on the side of the vehicle.

Taking an angkot can potentially be a nerve-racking experience for foreign visitors to Indonesia. In peak hours and on popular routes, drivers will try to cram in as many passengers as possible in order to maximise their profits. Officially, there is no maximum number of passengers permitted to board an angkot at one time. Consequently, taking an angkot can be a very cramped and uncomfortable experience, especially for taller passengers. Bear in mind too that most angkot drivers like to drive aggressively and fast, which is of course dangerous and can potentially be quite frightening for those on board.

If you choose to travel around Indonesia, you will discover that in many provinces, angkot goes by a different name. In Makassar, for example, an angkot is called pete-pete. In Bali, it is known as a bemo. In some parts of Java an angkot is called a mikrolet. And in Sumatra an angkot might even be referred to as a taksi. However, an angkot is not a taxi, nor does it look like a taxi.

Jalan-jalan - Travelling

In fact, the two modes of transports are very different. Take a look at the picture and see for yourself!

Ngetem is the practice of stopping the angkot or buses in order to wait for passengers.

An ojek is a motorcycle "taxi". When taking an ojek you must bargain with the driver before you set off, or ask a local what the price should be beforehand.

Delman is a horse-drawn carriage. Delman has different names in each province. It is called dokar or andong in Java, cidomo in Lombok, and bendi in Sumatra.

Bajaj is a noisy, motorised trishaw taxi. Bajaj can be found in many areas of Jakarta. The older version is bright orange and has two seats; the newer version is blue, bigger, cleaner, and more comfortable.

TransJakarta is a rapid transit bus system (BRT) in Jakarta, which currently has 10 routes covering the Jakarta area. There is also a BRT system in other parts of Indonesia such as Yogyakarta and Bali, which are called the TransYogya and TransSarbagita respectively.

Indonesians drive on the left-hand side of the road!

Jalan-jalan - Travelling

All vehicles in Indonesia may use any lane when driving, this includes private cars, trucks, angkots, motorcycles, and - in some areas - even delman and becak.

Motorcycles will overtake your car on either side. They will be doing this constantly and might often seem to have come out of nowhere, zigzagging their way across the road. So beware, and keep the steering wheel straight at all times.

To get onboard an angkot or bus, you simply have to wave your hand at the oncoming vehicle and it will pullover right in front of you. Angkots and buses can stop more or less anywhere, so don't hesitate when flagging one down.

Getting off a bus, metromini, angkot, or ojek in Indonesia is an unusual process for most foreigners. Unlike in other countries, if you want to stop the bus, metromini, angkot or ojek anywhere along its route, you simply shout the word "kiri!", which means "left", or you can say "kiri depan!" ("left ahead") or even "kiri-kiri!" Whichever phrase you choose, just make sure you say it loud enough so that the driver hears it.

Badminton

In Indonesia, badminton is perhaps one of the only sports that can rival the popularity of football. Indonesians take badminton very seriously, both as a spectator sport and a recreational activity. To play badminton one usually requires a racket, an opponent, a shuttlecock, a tall net and a standardised indoor court. Indonesians who have access to a local badminton court might play formally, indoors as described above. However, badminton courts can be hard to find outside of the GOR (sports halls) of the big cities, and will surely be impossible to find in the kampung (villages). Consequently, many Indonesians like to play badminton outside in the sun, often with a home-made net. In recent years Indonesia has produced some of the best badminton players in the world, so the popularity of sports looks set to keep growing.

Mall

Shopping malls are spreading rapidly in Indonesia. They are mainly concentrated in the big cities like Jakarta, Bandung and Yogyakarta, but increasingly they are beginning to spring up in large towns across the archipelago. Jakarta alone has a total of 130 malls at present, and that number looks set to keep growing. Some studies conclude that Jakarta already has more malls than any other capital city, although this is still a point of contention.

Kegemaran/hobi - Hobbies

In today's Indonesia, the shopping mall serves a number of significant societal functions. As in other developing nations around the world, the Indonesian shopping mall is not merely a center for buying and selling, but also a place to raise and exhibit one's social status. In any of Indonesia's gigantic malls, visitors can immerse themselves in the sterile atmosphere of ceramic floor tiles and immaculate glass facades, whilst shopping for expensive designer clothing and sampling foreign foods. Many Indonesians like to 'hang out' at shopping malls purely to take advantage of the air conditioning and the cleanliness inside. In a city so desperately lacking in public parks and green spaces - such as Jakarta - the mallmesin offers a temporary retreat from the hustle and bustle (and the traffic jams!) outside.

Aside from big fancy shopping malls, there is also an abundance of traditional markets in Indonesia, which cater to the everyday needs of local residents, like fruit and vegetables, meat and fish, clothing and household items etc. Additionally, mini markets and convenience stores like Indomaret and Alfamart can be found on almost any street in towns and cities across Indonesia. At the minimarts you can find soft drinks and snacks, toiletries, kitchen supplies, mobile phone credit ('pulsa') and even Western Union counters.

Kegemaran/hobi - Hobbies

Gamelan

Gamelan is perhaps the most famous of Indonesia's musical styles. A gamelan is a large musical ensemble made up of many different instruments. Typically an Indonesian gamelan has a very prominent percussion section, usually comprised of several metallophones, xylophones (jedor), drums (kendang) and gongs (kempul). Other nonpercussion instruments used in gamelan may include bamboo pipes (angklung) and various stringed instruments, which might be bowed or plucked. Gamelan originated on the islands of Java and Bali, it is thought to be an integral and essential part of Indonesian culture.

Dangdut

Dangdut is a popular kind of Indonesian music which incorporates Hindi, Arabic and Malay influences. It was developed in the early 1970's and reached the peak of its popularity in the 1990's. A dangdut band is typically comprised of a lead singer, male or female, backed by four to eight musicians. The instruments used in dangdut music usually include a tabla, flute, mandolin, guitars, and synthesizers. Dangdut music is often lively and fast-paced, thus encouraging listeners to dance. It is often played live at community events like wedding ceremonies and other celebrations. Some female dangdut vocalists like to dance in a rather provocative manner, which has been met by disapproving reviews from

Amusement park

In Indonesia you can find an amusement park in almost every city. The amusement park is a place where you can ride roller coasters, play fairground games, or just enjoy the atmosphere. Amusement parks in Indonesia are often twinned or combined with water parks and swimming facilities, where you can find an assortment of slides, pools and sometimes diving boards.

7.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

- In Indonesia, rice is the staple food. It can be found everywhere.

- At mealtimes, Indonesians like to eat with their hands (without using a knife, spoon or fork) whilst sitting cross-legged on floor mats around a dining table. This is called lesehan. Lesehan is very popular in Yogyakarta and Central Java.

Di rumah makan - At the restaurant

- The Padang region of Sumatra is well-known for its delectable cuisine, and Padang style restaurants are extremely popular throughout Indonesia. Usually a Padang restaurant will have the words Masakan Padang (Padang Cuisine) displayed on the window, and might also have a pointy rooftop as is typical of Padang style architecture. When dining in a Padang restaurant, you will either have to choose a selection of dishes from the front counter before you take a seat, or the waiter will bring a large selection of dishes to your table. You may then choose which ones to take. Each diner can opt for a selection of dishes to suit his or her own individual tastes, and need only pay for the dishes consumed. Alternatively, if you are in a hurry and want to order food for take-out, ask the waiter for dibungkus (literally 'in a packet'), and he or she will arrange it for you.

Di rumah makan - At the restaurant

Sambal. Indonesia's most famous culinary invention is perhaps the almighty sambal, known for its liberal use of hot chilli peppers and its fiery, spicy flavour. Typically, a basic sambal is made from a pounded mixture of chillies, shrimp paste, garlic, ginger, sugar, and/or lime juice. Sambal is added to soups and eaten with rice as a condiment to most meals, and it goes particularly well with ayam bakar (grilled chicken) and ikan bakar (grilled fish). Sambal varies in flavour from place to place, and also varies in hotness! So if you are squeamish or faint-hearted when it comes to chillies, then you should only use sambal very sparingly to begin with. As a general rule, it's always better to use too little sambal than too much, since you can't remove the sambal from your food once it gets in there, but you can always add more later should you so desire. Applying this simple principle at mealtimes will help you to avoid embarrassing accidents involving sambal, which often end in sweats, stomach pains, and of course - a lingering, burning sensation in the mouth! Alternatively, you might want to ask someone nearby - a friend or waiter, for example - sambal ini pedas sekali? Which means, 'Is this sambal very hot?' If the answer is Ya, pedas sekali, then you should take extra care not to use too much!

A word about Ketchup/Kecap. Aside from sambal, most Indonesian condiments fall into the general category of kecap. Kecap is derived from the English word 'ketchup', and is used to describe the various forms of soy sauce and other fermented sauces used in Indonesian cooking.

There are three main types of kecap which you ought to be familiar with as you begin to sample the delights of Indonesian cuisine. In no particular order, these are: kecap asin ('salty ketchup'), which is similar to Chinese light soy sauce though usually somewhat thicker; kecap manis ('sweet ketchup'), which a dark, sweet soy sauce of an almost treacle-like consistency; and finally kecap manis sedang, which is a medium soy sauce of moderate sweetness and a much thinner consistency. Kecap manis sedang is an essential ingredient in many Indonesian dishes, such as nasi goreng (fried rice), and kecap manis is used somewhat liberally by Indonesian diners as a one-size-fits-all condiment. Fried eggs and noodle soups, for example, are often lovingly doused with kecap manis before the diner gets stuck in. This is a spectacle you are sure to encounter in Indonesia's many warungs and restaurants.

Di rumah makan - At the restaurant

- The vast majority of Indonesians are Muslim, and therefore they only eat halal foods. In Indonesia, you will find many restaurants displaying signs for halal food.

Di rumah makan - At the restaurant

- Pengamen (buskers). In Indonesia, buskers can be seen and heard everywhere you go. Most frequently they will perform on public transport or in public places such as train stations, warung, kaki lima, or roadside eateries. Do not be alarmed if you are suddenly serenaded by a wandering guitarist or ukelele player whilst trying to eat your dinner in a restaurant, this is normal in Indonesia and is not considered intrusive by the locals. Similarly, you will often see pengamen on board buses and trains (and even angkots!), singing songs and then later asking for a small donation. If you enjoy the performance and the showmanship of the pengamen, then why not give two or three thousand rupiah to the busker as a token of your appreciation.

8.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

In Indonesia there is a group of illnesses commonly known as masuk angin. The term masuk angin may be used to describe several illnesses, including influenza, the common cold, fevers and headaches.

Many Indonesians prefer not to take medicine to cure masuk angin. Instead, they take herbal remedies (jamu), have a massage, or perform kerokan. Kerokan is the most common cure, and is performed on the patient's back. It involves lubricating the skin with balm and then scrubbing it with a coin.

Indonesians are also very fond of jamu, a mixed assortment of herbal remedies often sold by neighbourhood street vendors, but also available in shops.

Indonesians usually take jamu to treat minor illness, such as muscular pains and masuk angin. Additionally, Indonesians might take jamu simply for an energy boost or to maintain their stamina throughout a long working day.

Di rumah sakit - At the hospital

Most commonly, jamu is home-made by a local vendor, and sold from plastic bottles carried in a large basket strapped to the back of the jamu seller. However, these days jamu can also be found at many street-side stalls, known as kaki lima or warung. Increasingly, however, Indonesian factories are producing jamu on an industrial scale, thus endangering the businesses of the traditional neighbourhood jamu vendors.

Jamu is typically made up of a pulped mixture of roots, herbs, flowers, and spices, such as ginger, ginseng, turmeric, lemongrass, and rosela. However, local variations are widespread and might use a range of different ingredients. Feel free to try some jamu when you are in Indonesia, but as always, do exercise caution if taking the home-made jamu, since the safety of the product cannot be guaranteed.

9.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

Public services in Indonesia are provided at every level of government; from the largest to the smallest, these levels are: state (negara), province (provinsi), city (kota), district (kabupaten), sub-district (kecamatan), and village (desa or kelurahan). Officially the Republic of Indonesia is made up of provinces. Provinces are made up of cities and districts. Cities or districts are made up of sub-districts. And finally, sub-districts are made up of villages. Indonesia is currently comprised of 34 provinces.

Public services, such as immigration, can be found in every province. Police services are provided in every sub-district. In some provinces, postal services are provided down to the level of sub-district. A small number of banks also offer their services at the level of sub-district.

10.3 Informasi Tambahan - Additional Information

Oleh-oleh. Bringing souvenirs or oleh-oleh back from ones travels is a typical Indonesian custom. Normally, Indonesians will bring home some food as a souvenir or a present for their friends or guests. If you travel in Indonesia and later visit an Indonesian friend, you might like to bring them some oleh-oleh from your country too!

Tipping. When you join a tour, the tour guide who accompanies you will have already been paid by the tour operator. If you are satisfied with his or her services, then you might like to give a tip. You are free to choose whether or not to tip. In Indonesia, there is no compulsion to tip.

Tourist's Price. At tourist hotspots in Indonesia, as a tourist, you might have to pay more than Indonesian. For example, for tickets, food, and souvenirs. Sometimes, it is officially written:

Wisatawan mancanegara/turis asing Rp 100.000

Wisatawan domestik/turis lokal Rp 70.000

Enjoy this price because in Indonesian opinion non-Indonesian tourist is always wealthy.
